On a scale of 1 (low) to 10 (high), how would you rate your knowledge of NZ history before attending the Wall Walk?	I have a better knowledge of some of the patterns in the history of Māori-Crown relations in New Zealand.	I can better describe some of the significant historical and contemporary events in the Māori-Crown relationship.	I can explain the impacts of colonisation on Māori and Tūwhiri attitudes and behaviours today and can place current day New Zealand within this historical context.	I am more motivated to help improve outcomes for Māori, through my work and in my personal life.	Do you need help to figure out how to do this?	If 'yes', what sort of help do you think you need?	I would recommend the Wall Walk to others	Is there anything you would like to share with us about your Wall Walk experience?	If the Wall Walk helped you better understand te ao Māori please let us know how below.	Do you have any further thoughts you would like to share?

Made me realise I need to dig deeper into the detail of the country's history. I knew the broad arch of events, but its the detail that provides the colour.	This is something that would probably add too much time to the day, but along side the timeline of key events for Iwi/Māori, it could be helpful to also show key events as presented in 'traditional' histories of NZ. This could be helpful to add more context eg the things that were shaping Pakeha attitudes.

As a person who went to school here (and took history until year 12), it made me really upset to see how little we were taught. I'm so grateful to have the opportunity to learn about this.	I think having more context helped me to better understand the Māori-Crown relationship today.

The wall walk was excellent in opening my eyes and making me more informed.	I started to get some understanding of the injustices suffered by maori and the naked force that underlaid so many of the events	It was a truly excellent and impactful event.

Yes	I loved it. Simone was amazing, and the whole approach of involving us in the story telling was so powerful. I thought it was wonderful, and so important	The depth of the wrongs, and the lasting impact. It's one thing to know what intellectually, it's another to know it through stories of individuals.	Just that it was really great. Thanks so much.

Just that I definitely don't know how to do this at the moment	Yes	It was a great experience and the facilitator did a fantastic job. Thanks for organising	I didnt know about a lot of the post WW2 stuff. Overall I felt like it gave me a better understanding and context for the intergenerational trauma and ongoing issues occurring today

I don't think any one workshop, course or training session will ever be enough. This course is much better than most at getting to the heart of the matter. It's my second time doing it, I still learned many new things, and realistically we can only skimmed the surface in one day.	Yes	I really enjoyed doing it as an organisation. You could tell in the lead up follow staff were anxious that they didn't have the time to do this given other pressing priorities. I think most people at the end of day would have seen that it's one of the best cultural capability exercise you can do in a single day.	It confronts you with the scale and speed of raupatu and it's lingering intergenerational impact on Māori (and that redress to date is really just a drop in the bucket of what was taken)	Just some general thoughts that it would be great for politicians to do their own Wall Walks within their respective caucuses.

While the wall walk was helpful and interesting, it would have been nice to combine it with another event, such as Maui Tech, so those working remotely would have been able to join both.
